MEL GIBSON GETS ANIMATED OVER POCAHONTAS

FOR MEL GIBSON, being the voice of John Smith was an acting experience like no other. "It's like cutting off some of your senses and just using one aspect of yourself," Gibson says. "You have to use a lot more imagination and that becomes

"I'm a confirmed shower singer," Gibson confesses, "and that's kind of where I wanted to keep it. But I thought, 'What the heck, I'll give it a whack.' There's something refreshing about coming out of the shower and trying to yodel a few tunes."

THE MAN WHO WROTE JAMES AND THE GIANT PEACH

IN 1961, ROALD DAHL PUBLISHED James and the Giant Peach, his first book for "children." A lot of adults were not amused—they thought his book full of cruel characters and too much black humor. Kids on the other hand loved the book. And they loved Roald Dahl's other books—Charlie and the Chocolate Factory and The BFG and Revolting Rhymes. His daughter Tessa remembers how her dad started his stories: "He would come in and sit at the end of our bed at night just as we were getting ready to go to sleep and he would tell us a story. The one I remember most was actually The BFG. He would begin it and after about 15 minutes he would stop and say, 'You've got to go to sleep now.' If we said, 'Oh no, no tell us more,' he would think, 'That's a good one.' If we said, 'All right, good night,' he would scrap that idea. He was always on the side of children."
